

Speaker Profile: Ray Winger

Ray Winger is Professor of Food Technology at Massey University. He is the Director of the Albany campus for the Institute of Food, Nutrition and Human Health.

Ray has had a variety of career roles in research organisations, food industry, international consultancy and Massey University. He has introduced more than 30 food products to the supermarket shelves, and published across a wide range of subjects, including meat science, sensory sciences, food chemistry, food product development and water relations in food, especially frozen foods.

Ray has had extensive involvement with industry and industry groups, including as a Board member on Food Standards Australia New Zealand and currently the Chairman of the Independent Compliance Committee for the NZ Juice and Beverage Association – the only active self-policing industry compliance group in Australasia.